KEY STORY

Tatmadaw attacks increase in Kachin and Shan States

June 9 marked three years since conflict between the Tatmadaw and the Kachin Independence Army (KIA) resumed in Kachin State. At the end of May, the Tatmadaw increased militarization in Northern Shan State. Despite a 15 June meeting between the regime and ethnic armed groups’ peacemaking teams in Chiang Mai, Thailand, in June Tatmadaw aggressions increased against the KIA, Shan State Army North (SSA-N), and the Ta’ang National Liberation Army (TNLA) in Kachin and Shan States.
• 1 June: Tatmadaw troops from LIB 237 at Dum Bau Bum Village fired artillery shells in Mung Hka Village, Southern Kachin State, targeting KIA forces there.²

• 2 June: Tatmadaw troops from LID 77 clashed with TNLA Battalion 527 forces in Pa Hlaing Village, Kyaukme Township, Shan State.⁴

• 3 June: Tatmadaw troops from LID 88 clashed with TNLA Battalion 478 forces between Nam Seint and San Kar Villages, Namkham Township, Shan State.⁵

• 19 June: Tatmadaw troops gained control of a SSA-N camp at Red Ruby Mountain, Monghsu, Southern Shan State.¹⁶

• 20 June: Tatmadaw troops from LIB 88 clashed with KIA Battalion 27 forces in Pung Ling Village, Mansi Township, Kachin State.¹⁷

• 22 June: Tatmadaw troops from LIB 88 clashed with KIA Battalion 27 forces in Dingga Bum Village, Mansi Township, Kachin State.¹⁸

• 26 June: Tatmadaw troops from LIB 88 clashed four times with TNLA in Kutkai Township, Shan State.¹⁹

Tatmadaw attacks, kills, and displaces civilians in Kachin and Shan States

In June, Tatmadaw troops continued to attack and persecute civilians in Kachin and Shan States.

• 15 June: Residents fled after Tatmadaw forces burned down a house and opened fire on Ton Pan Village, Kutkai Township, Shan State, after clashing with the TNLA nearby.²⁰
• 15 June: Tatmadaw troops from LID 88 set up a new post in Nam Jang Gu Dawng Village, between Muse and Namkham Townships, Northern Shan State, and ordered 12 neighboring villages to each supply 50 bamboo poles and 20 hardwood posts.21
• 15 June: Tatmadaw troops from LID 66 ordered residents of three villages in Hpakant Township, Kachin State, to move out by the end of the month, and expelled jade miners without resident IDs to Moguang Township, Kachin State.22
• 16 June: Tatmadaw LIB 318 troops shot and killed Nbreng Gam Shawng, a 41-year-old Kachin IDP, near Mung Ding Pa Village, Mansi Township, Southern Kachin State.23
• 16 June: A Tatmadaw LIB 88 soldier killed Dashi Gam Seng, a 40-year-old shopkeeper in his shop in Nam San Godaung, on the road between Muse and Namkham Townships, Shan State.24
• 17 June: Tatmadaw troops from LIB 103 fired several mortar shells on Gaw Ngu Yang Village Mansi Township, Southern Kachin State.25

Tatmadaw breaks Karen National Liberation Army peace agreement

On 13-14 June, Tatmadaw troops in Tenasserim Division again violated the two-year-old peace agreement with the Karen National Liberation Army (KNLA) when they killed a KNLA soldier in Karen National Union (KNU)’s territory and attacked a KNLA camp twice.26 The previous breach took place in January [See January 2014 Burma Bulletin].

• 13 June: Tatmadaw troops from LIB 557 shot and killed a KNLA soldier on his way back from work, stole his rifle and attacked the neighboring KNLA Battalion 11 camp in Huaypha Village, Tavoy [Dawei] Township, Tenasserim Division.27
• 14 June: About 80 Tatmadaw troops from LIB 557 attacked KNLA Brigade 4 at a frontline outpost in Tavoy Township, Tenasserim Division.28

Kachin, Arakan IDP camp conditions “appalling”

On 17 June, after a four-day visit to IDP camps in Kachin and Arakan States, UN Assistant Sec-Gen & Deputy Emergency Relief Coordinator Kyung-wha Kang said she had “witnessed a level of suffering in IDP camps” that she had never seen before, with people living in “appalling conditions” with severe restrictions on their freedom of movement. She said many people had inadequate access to basic services including health, education, water and sanitation.29

On 17 June, it was reported that a two-year-old boy had died from diarrhea complications in a Rohingya IDP camp in Arakan State, after his family was unable to find medical assistance.30 In June, malaria and dysentery spread in IDP camps in Mantwynegyi Village, Mansi Township, Kachin State.31

Census data used for Rohingya ‘citizenship assessment’

On 15 June, the regime began ‘citizenship assessment’ in the Rohingya Taung Paw IDP camp in Myebon Township, Arakan State, for anyone who had identified as ‘Bengali’ in the census.32 The extended census data collection closed without enumerating Kachin and Arakan populations excluded

Arakan State Attorney-General Hla Thein told a press conference in Akyab [Sittwe] that Myebon IDP camp residents were cooperating with the ‘citizenship assessment’. Hla Thein said action would be taken against those who do not qualify as “we cannot allow the illegal settlers in our country”.\textsuperscript{35}

On 10 June, regime border guard and Maungdaw Township village administrators began their own ‘census’, causing Rohingya residents of Aley Than Kyaw and Kyeekanpyin Villages to flee.\textsuperscript{36} On 21 June, local administrators and regime border guard held two meetings with over 150 Rohingya residents, ordering them to identify as ‘Bengali’ in the survey or face consequences.\textsuperscript{37} On 23 June, Maungdaw Township officials threatened to block travel, marriage and bureaucratic processes for Rohingya residents if they did not identify as ‘Bengali’.\textsuperscript{38}

Discrimination against Rohingya continues

In Arakan State, regime security forces and extremist Buddhist Rakhine continued discriminatory policies and open attacks on Rohingya communities.

- 3 June: Maungdaw police declared they would arrest 50 Rohingya from Du Chee Yar Tan Village, Maungdaw Township, Arakan State, apparently over violence that took place in January.\textsuperscript{39}
- 5 June: Riot police burned 25 Rohingya-owned shops in Kyauk Hla Gaar market in Maungdaw Township, Arakan State, and arrested the shop owners.\textsuperscript{40}
- 6 June: It was reported that a court had sentenced 13 villagers from Du Chee Yar Tan Village, Maungdaw Township, to seven-year prison terms on 30 May, for their alleged involvement in the 14 January violence in Du Chee Yar Tan Village. Many of the convicted men were over 60 years old.\textsuperscript{31}
- 8 June: About 16 extremist Buddhist Rakhine disguised in police uniforms attacked four Rohingya men in Nwa Yon Daung Village, Maungdaw Township, Arakan State, demanding information about the Rohingya Solidarity Organization.\textsuperscript{42}
- 8 June: Maungdaw Township authorities reportedly enforced an 11pm–4am curfew under the Emergency Act using riot police, police, and Tatmadaw forces to restrict Rohingya movement.\textsuperscript{43}
- 22 June: Tatmadaw soldiers from Marawaddy outpost in Maungdaw Township, Arakan State, destroyed several betel farms, the only source of livelihood for several Rohingya families.\textsuperscript{44}

INSIDE BURMA

Regime tries to seize monastery land

On 10 June, the regime Religious Affairs Ministry and riot police raided the Mahasantisukha Monastery in Rangoon’s Tamwe Township, and detained staff and monks.\textsuperscript{45} The site is part of an ongoing land dispute between the abbot U Penang Sayadaw, who was away in Japan, and the regime-backed Sangha
(the body that oversees Burma’s Buddhist clergy). The regime Religious Affairs Ministry authorized the disrobing of five of the detained monks – including a British citizen, U Uttara. All five were charged under Articles 295 to 298 of the Criminal Code for insulting religion.

Immediate censure from political parties, celebrities, civil society organizations, and the UK government forced the regime to back off. On 19 June, regime Religious Affairs Minister Hsan Hsint was sacked. On 20 June, Tamwe Township Court released the five detained monks on bail, after which they returned to the monastery to be re-ordained.

Parliament’s tenth session continues

In June, Parliament continued its tenth regular session. Important developments included:

- 2 June: The National Parliament approved the Anti-Terrorism Bill after accepting some of President Thein Sein’s amendments [See January 2014 Burma Bulletin].
- 11 June: The National Assembly approved, by a vote of 117 to 85, a proposal to recommend to the regime Election Commission, a proportional representation system for the election of MPs to the National Assembly. The NLD and ethnic minority parties voted against the proposal. On 3 June, National Democratic Force (NDF) MP Khin Waing Kyi introduced the proposal to change from the first-past-the-post to the proportional representation voting system. On 11 June, National Assembly Speaker Khin Aung Myint formed a commission on the subject. The proposed change would require the constitution to be amended. NLD Central Executive committee member Win Myint said the NLD would not support a proportional representation voting system. The Nationalities Brotherhood Federation – an alliance of political parties – also objected because the proposed system would make it difficult for minority parties to win seats.
- 18 June: The National Parliament approved amendments to Article 18 of the Peaceful Gathering and Demonstration Law [See February 2014 Burma Bulletin]. The new amendments, introduced in November, require local authorities to provide “valid” reasons for refusing permission to would-be protesters, and reduce maximum prison terms for violators from one year to six months.
- 25 June: The National Parliament approved the Association Bill [See February 2014 Burma Bulletin]. The new law contains no penalties and enables organizations to apply for registration either at the regional level (30,000 kyat; US$30) or at the national level (100,000 kyat; US$100).

Constitutional review committee holds on to Article 59(f)

On 10 June, the 31-member parliamentary committee tasked with reviewing the compilation of suggested amendments to the constitution said they had decided, by a vote of 26-5, to retain Article 59(f) in the constitution, which bars anyone with a foreign spouse or offspring from running for president in 2015. The committee’s recommendations will go to Parliament for debate and vote.

Constitutional amendment campaign gains momentum

In June, NLD and 88 Generation Peace and Open Society campaigned across Burma to amend Article 436 of the 2008 constitution. Although Chin and Kachin State authorities rejected the applications to hold public meetings, many people still attended.

- 2 June: About 300 supporters gathered in Haka, Chin State although authorities refused permission.
- 3 June: Daw Aung San Suu Kyi addresses a crowd at a rally in Naypyidaw.
- 8 June: About 5,000 people attended a rally in Tavoy [Dawei], Tenasserim Division.
- 10 June: More than 10,000 people attended a rally in Monywa, Sagaing Division.
- 10 June: People in Mergui, Tenasserim Division, rallied for constitutional amendments.
- 12 June: About 3,000 people attended the rally in Kyunhla Township, Sagaing Division.
- 14 June: It was reported that over 1,000 people gathered in Myitkyina, Kachin State, after state authorities refused to allow a rally in Bhamo.
- 21 June: Daw Aung San Suu Kyi addressed a rally in Taungoo, Pegu Division.
- 29 June: About 3,000 people attended the rally in Prome Township, Pegu Division.

On 4 June, two more ethnic political parties, Mon National Party and Kayan New Land Party announced their support for the campaign. As of 30 June, the campaign had already gathered more than 3.3 million signatures.

Drug production continues unabated

Two reports released in June documented an increase in opium poppy cultivation and opium production in Burma. Regime Home Affairs Deputy Minister Brig Gen Kyaw Kyaw Tun admitted that Burma’s 15-year drug eradication program had failed and needed to be extended another five years.

- 2 June: The Transnational Institute (TNI) report, “Bouncing Back: Relapse in the Golden Triangle”, said China and India’s rising heroin demand was pushing poppy cultivation in Burma, and that repressive anti-opium policies had driven hundreds of thousands of families into greater poverty.
- 26 June: The UN Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC)’s “World Drug Report 2014” said that in 2013 opium cultivation and production in Burma were up 13% and 26% respectively from 2012.

HUMAN RIGHTS

More charged, sentenced under restrictive laws

In June, more activists, many protesting against land confiscation, were charged under Article 18.
• 1 June: Police in Tavoy [Dawei], Tenasserim Division, filed multiple charges, including assault and the use of obscene language, against 20 farmers for “disturbing” local authorities in a land dispute. On 3 June, police briefly detained the farmers for questioning before releasing them on bail.77

• 4 June: A court in Rangoon’s Kyauktada Township sentenced Movement for Democracy Current Force (MDCF) activist Htin Kyaw to three months in prison for protesting against land confiscation in Thameelay Village, in Rangoon’s Hlegu Township.78

• 5 June: Myitkyina District Court, Kachin State, sentenced three Kachin IDPs: La Ring, Laphai Gum, and Brang Yone, under the Explosives Act to prison terms of three, 13, and 14 years respectively for alleged links to a bomb plot.79 Since 2013, the three had been serving prison terms under the Unlawful Associations Act for alleged ties to the KIA.80

• 10 June: Shwegu Township Court, Kachin State, sentenced ethnic Kachin village leader Mali Tang to 22 years imprisonment under the Explosives Act for allegedly planning a bomb attack against the Tatmadaw in June 2013.81

• 17 June: Police in Maymyo, Mandalay Division, charged human rights activist Su Su Nway under Article 18 of the Peaceful Gathering and Demonstration Law for organizing an unauthorized protest against land confiscation on 16 June.82

• 19 June: It was reported that local authorities in Maddyaya Township, Mandalay Division, had charged a group of farmers under Article 18 of the Peaceful Gathering and Demonstration Law for organizing a plow protest on confiscated land.83

• 24 June: Rangoon’s South Okkalapa Court sentenced MDCF activist Htin Kyaw to six months in prison under Article 505(b) of the Criminal Code for distributing anti-regime pamphlets on 5 May.84

• 24 June: MDCF members Tin Maung Kyi and Zaw Win were tried under Article 505(b) of the Criminal Code, for protesting in Rangoon’s Tamwe, Bahan, and Mingala Taungnyunt Townships.85

• 25 June: Police in Matupi, Chin State, interrogated and charged four activists, Thang Zin, Khin Lwe Parh, Mong Han, and Tate Manh, under Article 18 of the Peaceful Gathering and Demonstration Law for organizing a protest against sexual violence.86

NLD land rights defender killed

On 4 June, two unidentified males abducted land rights defender San Tun from his home. San Tun was also the NLD Vice-Chairman for Ming Pyin Village, Hopong Township, Shan State. On 5 June, San Tun’s body was found near his village with bullet holes in the back of his head and wounds on his hands. Three bullet casings and a flashlight were found near his body.87 San Tun had helped local farmers demand the return of land seized by Tatmadaw troops from LIB 249.88

\textbf{DISPLACEMENT}

\textbf{Migrant workers face challenges in Thailand and Malaysia}

Following the 22 May coup in Thailand, foreign migrant workers faced difficulties with Thai authorities. The curfew imposed from 22 May till 13 June prevented many from working night shifts.

- \textbf{3 June:} In two separate mass arrests, Thai authorities arrested at least 363 Burmese migrant workers in Mae Sot, Thailand.\textsuperscript{93}
- \textbf{3 June:} It was reported that the Thai junta had closed all unofficial border crossings, forcing workers to swim across rivers to get to work, or risk arrest by using official border crossings.\textsuperscript{94}
- \textbf{5 June:} Thai authorities arrested 136 undocumented Burmese migrants in Ranong Province, Thailand.\textsuperscript{95}
- \textbf{11 June:} More than 100 Thai police conducted an extensive door-to-door raid in Chiang Mai, Thailand, and detained at least 81 undocumented Burmese migrant workers.\textsuperscript{96}
- \textbf{12 June:} It was reported that nearly 1,000 Burmese migrant workers had been detained in Thailand since 3 June.\textsuperscript{97}
- \textbf{13 June:} Thai authorities deported 52 Burmese migrant workers to Tachilek Township, Shan State.\textsuperscript{98}
- \textbf{16 June:} Thai junta denied the crackdown on migrant workers, stating that current efforts were in place to keep them “under control”.\textsuperscript{99}
- \textbf{21 June:} After talks with Thai junta leaders, Burma’s Ambassador to Thailand Win Maung said that the regime would fully support documented migrant workers in Thailand, but did not mention any efforts to protect undocumented workers.\textsuperscript{100}
- \textbf{22 June:} Malaysian authorities detained 29 undocumented Burmese migrant workers in Bukit Kayu Hitam Town, Kedah State, on the Thai-Malaysian border.\textsuperscript{101}

Earlier talks between the regime and the former Thai government on migrant workers were put on hold. On 25 June, Thailand’s National Council for Peace and Order (NCPO) announced that some undocumented migrant workers could be granted temporary permits and exemption from deportation or imprisonment, but it remains unclear how individual cases will be handled.\textsuperscript{102}

US: Burma ranked at “Tier 2 Watch List” for third consecutive year

On 20 June, the US State Department issued its annual “Trafficking in Persons Report 2014,” which ranks countries in four tiers according to their compliance with the minimum standards of the US Trafficking Victims Protection Act. The report found that the regime failed to demonstrate overall increasing efforts to combat trafficking from the previous year. As a result, for the third straight year, Burma was ranked at “Tier 2 Watch List”, the second-lowest ranking. The report found that various regime practices continued to fuel human trafficking:\(^{104}\)

- Tatmadaw officials engaged in the forced conscription of child soldiers and forced men and boys through coercion, threats, and violence to serve in the Tatmadaw.
- Tatmadaw and regime officials systematically forced men, women, and children into working on infrastructure projects or state-run agricultural and commercial projects.
- Military officials involved in extracting forced labor from civilians or the forced recruitment of child soldiers often did so with impunity.
- The regime’s ongoing refusal to recognize an estimated 800,000 men, women, and children, the majority of whom were Rohingya, as citizens, and their failure to provide them with identification documentation, left them vulnerable to trafficking.

Burma is the sixth largest source of refugees worldwide

On 20 June (World Refugee Day), the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) released its annual report “Global Trends 2013”. The report identified Burma as the world’s sixth largest source of refugees. As of December 2013, 479,600 refugees had originated from Burma. Burma was also the fifth largest source of pending asylum claims, with 45,038 cases filed as of December 2013.\(^{105}\)

On 10 June, UNHCR stated that from January to April this year, nearly 15,000 people – mostly Rohingya – had fled from Burma on boats, and faced increased exploitation and abuse, particularly from smugglers and traffickers.\(^{106}\)
